PHOTOGRAPH MYSTERY.

Hartford Fost-

The last object viewed in life is said to be so impressed upon the retinia of the eye that it can be photographed therefrom after death. When this theory was first broached, an occasional effort was made to test its accuracy as a means of identifying murderers, and the most extraordinary of the cases forms the groundwork of the present story.

In the summer of 18—, a young physician named Edwing Stone commenced practice in a certain village not a great way from New York city. He invested all the money he had in the world in a cheap little cottage, which he selected, not for its business advantages, but because it was the very pink of perfection in all other respects. For the fact was, he was engaged to be married as soon as his circumstances would admit. His affianced wife was Ella Thorne, the daughter of the lawyer; and, poor as Edwin Stone was, he would not have exchanged her silver voice for a golden dower.

To keep up an appearance—and indis-pensable thing in this world—the Doctor was obliged to keep some one to answer the door and make himself generally useful. In accordance with an invariable custom, the Doctor got the largest youth he could obtain for the money, and this happened to be a dogged fellow who had such a hang-dog look that he enjoyed the enviable reputation of having "a devil in him." Of course, the wages that Seth, as he was called, received from the Decter ware, not sufficient to keep, body Doctor were not sufficient to keep body and soul together, and as he wrote an excellent hand, two birds were killed with one stone by Lawyer Thorne's giving him occasional employment as a

Just at this time a wealthy man of science offered a large sum of money for the best treatise on the subject alluded to at the commencement of this article. Being thoroughly conversant with everything pertaining to the subject, Edwin Stone applied himself to the task like an enthusiast.

The manuscript was finished and sent away, and both Edwin and Ella awaited the result with beating hearts, for the prize offered was sufficient to enable them to marry at once.

At length the momentous period arrived, and the result justified their san guine expectation; Edwin was declared entitled to the prize, and was duly notiled to appear and receive the amount in

The two were almost beside themselves with joy, and the day was fixed at once. Edwin lost no time in securing the money, but like most young doctors, he had no bank account, so on returning home with the amount late at night he took the precaution to fasten it in a belt about his waist. After dismissing Seth, who was waiting his return, Edwin sat down by his bedroom fire, and was soon lost in one of those reveries where every-thing is couleur de rose.

The next morning Seth was on his way to the cottage, as usual, when he en-countered Lawyer Thorne, who was just starting out for his morning walk.

"I think we are going to have a fine day," said he to Seth.
"It may be," replied the latter; "but it will be a windy one, if that red sky is finished all but a page or two of your last job it will take you but a moment or two to do it now." Seth was at first disinclined to comply, but he finally went in and sat down with pen in hand, waiting for the ink, which the lawyer brought from his desk in the adjoining room.

Before commencing Seth drew his hand across his eyes as if to brush off something that blurred his sight, and he had scarcely written the first word before had scarcely written the first word belove he started up and angrily exclaimed: "I didn't ask you for red ink!"

The ink was as black as the ace of spades, and this being Seth's second op-tical delusion that morning the lawyer advised him to defer the copying for a short time.

Seth thereupon departed for the doc-tor's cottage and shortly afterward came rushing back to announce that he had fushing back to announce that he had found Edwin Stone with a hatchet embedded in his scull.

In consequence of his suspicions conduct at Lawyer Thorne's, Seth was promptly arrested and speedily brought to trial. Directly after the murder it transpired that the prize for the treatise was offered by a gentleman who knew of the pecu-liar situation in which Edwin Stone and Ella Thorne were placed; and in offering that prize he accomplished the double purpose of advancing the interests of science and of rendering pecuniary assistance in a delicate way.

Being an enthusiast in regard to the theory upon which poor Stone had written, he determined to reduce it into practice as a means of conviction. He therefore employed one of the most skillful photographers in New York City to photograph the eye of the murdered man, and thus obtained a portrait of the

An Elephantine Joke

The fun here is all on one side. A better joke is where each side enjoys the fun.

We like to have our customers enjoy such a joke, to go away under the impression that they have the "best bargain" in the city. Then both enjoy it.

Practice this joke with one of our Overcoats. We are sure you'll be pleased and so will we.
